

Kagan

Proudly Presents Tom “Fin” Finegan

Tom “Fin” Finegan has been a Kagan consultant since 1996. After retiring from the Michigan Public School System after 31 years, he became a full time trainer for Kagan in the summer of 2019. He is currently the Director of Training and Curriculum for Kagan. He presents workshops for K–12 teachers and is an instructor for graduate level courses. Participants rate his presentations as being excellent, informative, organized, motivating, real, humorous, and exciting! Fin received a Bachelor of Science degree in general science and a Master’s degree in learning disabilities from Michigan State University. He regularly used Kagan Structures and materials in his middle school science and physical education classes which continues to provide him with many real-life management tips to share with workshop participants. He was also the Behavior Interventionist and Dean of Students at his school where the Win-Win Discipline philosophy was embedded to help students make better choices to meet their needs in a more appropriate manner. In addition, as a coach, he used Kagan Structures during middle school football, basketball, and track practices. As a Kagan consultant, Fin models and teaches other educators to create an environment in which all students are engaged in the learning process as well as in becoming better people by acquiring life skills.